Useful Services for your daily-life
Tutoring Service

@ University of Padova

School of Sciences
Who is the tutor?

- The tutors are students and graduate students who help others enrolled in their college career, supporting the study and providing them with information.

Tutors are involved in:

- Providing a concrete support to students
- Study groups for first-year students

The effectiveness of aid is that the tutor is finishing his studies in the same course of study and is therefore the best person to date in the areas of teaching and the organization of the department itself.
Tutoring @ School of Science

Tutors are students of the master's degree, doctoral students and interns who are interested in maintaining a relationship with university life and offer to support the "new generation" that begin to delve into the intricacies of the academic world.

We:

- Support the activities of first-year students.

- Organize study groups in which students can compare, exchange expertise and learn together with friends and classmates.

- Act as mediators between students and professors.

- Keep updated tutoring website/manage e-mails/help with coordination activities.
Study Groups

We:

- Manage free access study groups for all students (with priority for freshmen).

- Help students with practical problems that can arise when studying, in particular by providing facilities in order to solve those problems.

- Provide references in order to find teaching materials.

- Are in touch with teachers as regards the arrangement of study groups.
Tutoring Information

For any advice relevant to the teaching and the course of study you can contact the tutor to the e-mail address:

E-Mail: tutorjunior.scienze@unipd.it
